

Democracy can best be served by airing fair and balanced information. It is critical that we, the consumers, receive clear and unbiased reporting about topics that are of interest to our community. Sinclair Broadcasting's move to require their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary just days before the election is a good example of why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. The public's interest needs to be served as the law requires. Sinclair is using FREE airways!

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
